Professional summary

Annamaria Janekova was born on September 26th in Bratislava, Slovakia. She studied at the Academy of performing arts in Bratislava, earning her title Master of arts in acting. She also studied at the Baron Brown acting Studio founded by Joanne Baron in Los Angeles, being taught the Meisner Technique for acting. As a child she grew up in Germany and Slovakia which contributed to the actress being multilingual. She speaks Slovak, English, and German, therefore making her eligible and promising for an international career. Her credits include stage productions at the Slovak National Theater, the City Theater in Bratislava, and her latest work in portraying characters for multiple TV series in Slovak television. Annamaria is a hardworking, passionate individual. She uses all creativity, vulnerability, and imagination to deliver the best performances for film and theater. Her greatest strengths are intellect, persistence, and determination to accomplish and deliver best results for her work. She constantly works on her craft and on widening her own intellectual range. She combines playfulness, humor and intelligence when creating a character. Annamaria always prepares for her roles and collects all needed information such as behavioral, emotional, and historical context. She loves to read and is very intrigued in understanding the full complexity of a human personality. She demonstrates the proven ability to learn lines quickly with profound knowledge of Meisner technique. Annamaria trained with various vocal coaches and has a strong voice trained for the stage and singing. During her studies she learned stage movement, modern dance, ballroom dance, playing the piano. She is very adaptable and a fast learner for new skills.
